Iron Country #11:

*"Immigrant Labor, Unions and Range Politics"
--They came by the thousands... young men and younger women from all parts of Europe...in search of a new way of life. What they found were the stark towns of Iron Country, and work in the region's mines, camps and boarding houses. They built vibrant communities, rallied to the cause of labor, stood fast during violent strikes, and gave birth to a particular variety of politics that they could call their very own. Their story is the one we tell on this edition of Iron Country.*
